In order to improve educational work at school, and in the all-round development of students, regular out-of-class study lessons are important for young people to take their place in life. The main purpose of studying outside the classroom is to increase students' interest in books and works of art, to develop skills and abilities related to working on books based on their knowledge, to develop worldly language and speech, and to create experiences of independent work in the library. To achieve these goals, encourage young readers to read books independently; it is necessary to introduce students to literature and their types suitable for age characteristics, to choose books for independent reading, to read selected books consciously, to teach them to perceive the content of what they read, to think, to reason. When choosing a book for reading outside the classroom, attention is paid to its educational and educational value.

The main part of their important tasks in the education of primary school students is carried out through reading activities. In the course of reading classes, students are given knowledge on the basis of the topics determined by the State Education Standard. In addition to improving reading skills, the task of educating students in the spirit of a well-rounded person will also be in the center of attention. According to the goals and objectives of the study program in primary education, students are taught to read correctly, consciously, fluently, quickly and expressively through reading activities. In this process, children acquire the skills of working with books and develop a love for books.

It is important to choose books that are interesting to children when teaching them books. If elementary school students are interested in animals, they should read a story about the life of animals. If a book is read without sparing time, the child will gradually begin to read a book independently on a regular basis.

Children should be taken to the library often. Children should be taken to the library at least once a week in order to develop reading skills. It is useful to review the book together, choose it together, and read it together. It is important to talk about books often. If we want to increase children's love and enthusiasm for reading books, we should often tell fairy tales, stories, and talk about books in general and their meaning. It is necessary to try to relate real events that happened in life to children in fairy tales and stories. In addition, you can watch the movie, cartoon version of a certain book together, and then compare, and find out the ideas you get from the book and the movie. It teaches children not only to read books, but also to observe, and also increases their ability to analyze.

As parents read to the child interesting fairy tales and stories that lead him to the world of fantasy, the qualities of courage, bravery, willpower, solidarity, kindness and love, goodness are perfectly formed in the child. This process is continued by the parents until the child takes his first step to school, and after entering primary school, he begins to try to read books on his own. In the family, the parents, and the teacher in the school should develop the student's reading skills and arouse the child's desire to read books.

In conclusion, it should be noted that it is important to choose a book that is suitable for their age and interests when giving books to young readers or reading them. Every parent should consider and give importance to this when choosing a book.
